SEATTLE POLICE DEPARTMENT
2006 ANNUAL REPORT

Officer Joselito "Lito" Barber
June 26, 1980 - August 13, 2006

ASSISTANT CHIEF TED JACOBY

JANUARY 14, 1948 - SEPTEMBER 4, 2006

Assistant Chief Ted Jacoby was a 30-year veteran of the Seattle Police Department. He was born and raised in Seattle, and received a Bachelor's degree in Economics from the University of Washington and a Master of Public Administration degree from the University of Puget Sound. A highly decorated member of the military, he served two tours in Vietnam as a Medevac pilot and retired from the U.S. Army after 22.5 years at the rank of Lt. Colonel. Throughout his long career at SPD, he held a wide variety of assignments, including serving as the Operations Lieutenant of the North Precinct and the commander of the 9-1-1 Center as Captain. In 2005, he was promoted to Assistant Chief of the Emergency Preparedness Bureau. He was a loving and devoted husband to his wife Pat for 33 years. He is survived by his wife, five sisters, three brothers and his mother.

OFFICER JOSELITO BARBER

JUNE 26, 1980 - AUGUST 13, 2006

Officer Joselito "Lito" Barber was raised in Seattle and was interested in law enforcement from an early age. He earned his Bachelors of Arts degree at the University of Washington and also began working at Home Depot as a loss prevention officer to acquire skills for a law enforcement career. He was appointed as a Seattle police officer in January of 2006. While working East Precinct, 1st Watch, Lito's patrol car was struck by a speeding vehicle, killing him instantly. He is survived by his parents, brother, sister, and fiancée.

OFFICER BETH NOWAK

NOVEMBER 5, 1976 - NOVEMBER 13, 2006

Officer Nowak was born in Greenfield Wisconsin. She spent 8 years as a U.S. Air Force reservist, serving in Afghanistan. In 2001, she joined the Racine, Wisconsin Police Department before deciding to move to Seattle and join the Seattle Police Department. She had only completed her field training five days earlier and was excited to begin her career as a patrol officer when she was tragically killed. She is survived by her mother, father and sister.

message from the Chief

2006 was one of the more painful and difficult years I've ever experienced in my 34 years of policing.

It was a year of staggering losses for both the Department and the community. In August the Department experienced the tragic death of Officer Joselito Barber. A bright, dedicated, and energetic new officer, Officer Barber was killed when his police car was struck by a vehicle speeding through an intersection. Just three months later to the day, Officer Beth Nowak was on her way to work when the driver of a stolen vehicle struck her personal car. The similarities in the two cases were heartbreakingly alike, Ofc. Nowak worked the same watch in the same precinct as Ofc. Barber, and both were hit by recently released inmates with long records. Both officers were brand new to the department, both excited to start their new careers and begin their young lives. Both were very promising officers and we will never know the full extent of what they might have contributed to the community and this Department.

Also in 2006, we lost one of the most professional and dedicated members of the Department Assistant Chief Ted Jacoby. His long career was laced with accolades and accomplishments. He was highly regarded by his colleagues in SPD and in the U.S. Army, where he served in Vietnam and was recognized for his heroism in piloting Medevac helicopters. And the whole Seattle Police Department was touched by the loss of King County Sheriff's Deputy Steve Cox, who worked in the White Center community. His absence is deeply felt in the community he served—they called him their "Superman"—as well as by the Seattle police officers he often worked with side by side.

The community grieved alongside police officers during all of these times. From letters of support to the spontaneous memorials that appeared at accident sites, the response from the community was overwhelming and showed that the sacrifices of law enforcement are felt by everyone.

We were also there for the community in the wake of two extraordinary events: the Capitol Hill mass killing and the shooting at the Jewish Federation. Because of our response and the training of our officers, I have no doubt that as horrific as these crimes were they could have been even worse. Officers responded quickly and decisively to both incidents to stop the bloodshed. Communications personnel were directly responsible for negotiating with the perpetrator at the Jewish Federation and getting him to put down his gun and surrender.

2006 did see a number of positive developments for SPD:

- CALEA, an independent authority that establishes professional standards for law enforcement agencies, first awarded the Seattle Police Department accreditation in 2003. In 2006, the Department was reaccredited, and the team leader in charge of the assessment called SPD one of the most professional agencies he has reviewed.
- With the support of the community, the media, the Mayor, and the City Council, SPD has gained 49 new sworn officer positions between 2005-2007. This is part of a long term plan that will increase the size of the force by over 150 officers.
- Despite unusual incidents, serious crime for 2006 was at the lowest rate in over 30 years. Reductions in auto theft and car prowls led the way.

The Department was tested in both personal losses and in shocking violent crimes, and everyone in Seattle clearly saw that the men and women in the Department supported their own and the community in tough times. The acts of true heroism that I witnessed many times over this past year could not make me more proud of this Department.

Chief R. Gil Kerlikowske

ONE YEAR

What does 365 days mean to one police department in one American city? The incredibly diverse responsibilities, and the very nature of policing defies the concept of routine business.

Behind some of the statistics, such as the 15,986 traffic accident reports taken or 7,343 calls to 911 to report burglaries, it is hard sometimes to remember that each number represents one—usually very bad—day for the people directly involved. And then there are days that affect an entire community. A mass shooting. An officer lost. A heroic response. A life saved.

2006 had more than its fair share of days that were far from routine. While the raw numbers of what happened over the year are here, so are the major events that shaped 2006. In a 24/7 environment, all one year can ever be is a snapshot in time in the middle of all the work that came before and continues every single day.

There is no time off from crime and no time off from policing. Just one minute after the new year dawns, a Neighborhood Corrections Initiative (NCI) team swoops into action at 4th and Lenora in Belltown.

Initiated by the East Precinct, the Get Off the Streets Program (GOTS) provides assistance and direction to help the chronically homeless, particularly those with drug and alcohol addictions. GOTS aims to end the cycle of sending the chemically dependant and homeless repeatedly through the criminal justice system. The program is an informal, non-judgmental "drop-in" environment that provides assistance in everything from navigating the criminal justice system to finding shelters and drug/alcohol treatment programs.

2.5.2006

The excitement in Seattle was palpable, but cautious. “12th Man” pennants, flags, banners, and shirts were easy to spot, but even after a stellar season it seemed like Seattleites still couldn’t quite believe that the Seahawks were going to the Super Bowl. For Officer Shelton Robinson, it was a particularly unique moment. Robinson played defense for the 1984 Seahawks team, which led the record in games won until this season. Robinson himself led the team in tackles (bad news for any suspect that tries to flee from him now). Robinson has been a Seattle police officer for 14 years, but still fondly remembers his time with the Seahawks.

It turns out Seattle was right to be cautious. The Seahawks lost to the Pittsburgh Steelers, 21-10.

Detective Shandy Cobane of the Gang Unit checks a youth’s identification during his Saturday night patrol of Rainier Avenue. In recent years Seattle has seen a resurgence of gang-related crimes. On February 13, the Violent Gang Task Force, a partnership effort between the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) and Seattle Police, announced that they had arrested a total of 16 members of the notorious East African Posse, known for distribution of crack and cocaine, firearms violations, kidnappings and assaults. If convicted, some of those indicted face mandatory minimum sentences of ten years to life in prison.

At 4:00 a.m. Officer Jacob Haines was on his regular patrol route. Although it was still dark, he happened to look at just the right time to notice black smoke coming from a house. He radioed for backup and then began to check for occupants. He forced entry into the door, entered the smoke-filled house, and found a male occupant wandering around disoriented who refused to leave the house. Haines finally convinced him, and by this time Ofc. James Parnell arrived. Both officers went back in the house and located an unresponsive female in the bedroom. At this point, firefighter Jason Lynch had arrived, and the three of them were able to pull the woman to safety. The fact that Ofc. Haines happened to "on-view" this incident before any sort of call could be placed surely saved two lives that morning.

3.25.2006

Two mourners keep vigil outside a house that was the scene of one of the worst mass-homicides in Seattle's history. At a house hosting an afterparty for a rave, a disturbed young man began to open fire in the crowded house around 7:00 in the morning. Officer Steve Leonard was in the area, heard the shots, and arrived at the scene. A group of fleeing young people told him there was a person shooting inside the house, and Ofc. Leonard found a man on the sidewalk with a gunshot wound. Ofc. Leonard had called for backup, but realizing lives were in imminent danger, he decided to confront the suspect. Seeing the suspect on the porch, he used bushes as cover to get closer before ordering the suspect to drop his weapon. The suspect responded by turning the gun on himself. A total of six victims died in the shooting and two were wounded, but surely more may have been hurt if Ofc. Leonard had not responded when and how he did.

4.23.2006

A CSI Investigator takes photos of a Seattle Police patrol car damaged by gunfire. In a city still reeling from a horrific shooting incident, 9-1-1 calls coming from a typically quiet residential street less than a month later reporting gunshots seemed to continue the streak of unusual shooting incidents. Officer Marshall Harner was the first to arrive on the scene. On his second pass through the street, the suspect emerged, stood directly in front of his patrol car and opened multiple rounds. Ofc. Harner sustained non-life threatening injuries. Still under fire, Harner reversed his car, turned it at an angle for cover, secured his rifle and returned fire. Although backup had now arrived, Ofc. Harner recognized that he had the best weapon and was best prepared to protect responding officers, and continued to engage despite being injured. When the shooting stopped, the suspect turned the gun on himself and ended his own life.

4.25.2006

Just two days after the last shooting incident, a number of citizens reported a “crazed” man with a gun making his way down Broadway Avenue E. He was engaging in fights with several citizens while brandishing a loaded pistol, reportedly vowing to shoot people as he walked the crowded streets of Broadway. Officers Brian Kokesh and Eric Holland responded and located the suspect. Before they could reason with him, he pulled the gun from behind his back and aimed directly at them. The officers drew their weapons, killing the suspect. The suspect’s gun was aimed so directly at the officers, that one of the officer’s bullets actually went into the cylinder from the other side.

5.1.2006

On May 1 the Washington State Law Enforcement Memorial was officially dedicated. The idea for the memorial began in 1995 when a number of surviving family members of line-of-duty-death officers and currently serving law enforcement officers traveled to Washington, D.C. to visit the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial. They discovered over 35 states had law enforcement memorials, but the State of Washington had no official way to honor law enforcement line-of-duty deaths. After ten years of fund-raising, the dream became reality in 2006.

5.12.2006

Traffic patrol Officer Glen Cook and Sergeant Paul Kloss were working near Westlake Center downtown when they were informed by a citizen that a man had just collapsed about a block away. They rushed to the scene, discovered that the man was not breathing and had no pulse, and immediately began administering CPR. Sgt. Kloss administered mouth-to-mouth while Ofc. Cook performed chest compressions. After a few cycles the man began to breathe again, and the crowd surrounding the scene broke into applause. The Fire Department arrived and the man and his wife were rushed to Harborview. Despite suffering a severe heart attack, the man recovered fully without impairment. In a thank you letter he wrote, "their ability to quickly react to the situation did not just save my life, but also saved my quality of life."

6.16.2006

East Precinct Officers Danny Enriquez and Casey Sundin talk to two men outside of Cal Anderson Park, an area that had been plagued by chronic problems for years. Recent partnership efforts between “The Friends of Cal Anderson” park and East Precinct officers made significant clean-up efforts in the last three years. Cal Anderson is just one of about a dozen targeted partnership efforts in which the Department works on with community groups in neighborhoods throughout the city.

6.17.2006

Residents of the Southwest Precinct enjoy an afternoon of free food, precinct tours, and getting close enough to pet the horses. Sponsored by the Seattle Police Foundation, the “Picnic at the Precinct” events allow community members to meet the officers that serve their area in a relaxed and friendly atmosphere. Started in 2004, the events grow more popular every year, and by 2007 each precinct will host one.

7.24.2006

As part of the Mayor Greg Nickels' traffic and pedestrian safety program, the Department began a 12-month pilot project to study the most accident prone intersections and the impact of using automatic cameras at traffic lights. Sensors at these intersections cue the cameras to take a picture of the license plates of cars that run a red light. Effective in July 2006, the Department began reviewing each violation and, if verified, sending a $101 citation to the registered owner of the vehicle. By the end of the year, over 8,600 citations for red light violations had been issued.

7.28.2006

At approximately 4:00 p.m., the 9-1-1 center began receiving calls about a gunman in the Jewish Federation Center in downtown Seattle. When call-taker Lieth Nedell answered her line, she found herself talking directly to the gunman. One of the victims in the center had handed the phone to the suspect when he caught her calling for help. Nedell and Chief Dispatcher Debra Cepeda worked the call together, calming the man to the point that he did not continue the violence and was eventually willing to surrender to officers at the scene.

An officer rushes to the scene of the Jewish Federation where a lone gunman had entered the building and opened fire. Within a few minutes he had shot six people, one of them fatally, and began a standoff with the police. While officers from the West Precinct and SWAT teams responded to the 9-1-1 calls pouring in, four officers in the area had already seen people fleeing from the site and were the first in the building. They were able to keep one victim from bleeding out before medics arrived and were cleared to enter.

8.13.2006

At 4:09 a.m., Officer Joselito Barber was on routine patrol in the Central District of the Seattle Police Department's East Precinct. While entering an intersection on a green light, a speeding vehicle ran the red light and collided with his patrol car. Officer Barber was transported to Harborview where he was pronounced dead. The driver of the car, was charged with vehicular homicide and cocaine possession. She had been released from prison just 10 days before. A spontaneous outpouring of community support created an ever-growing memorial at the accident site.

8.21.2006

What it means to be part of a law-enforcement "family" becomes very evident when an officer dies in the line of duty. For Officer Barber's memorial service, held at the University of Washington's Hec Ed Pavilion, officers from the Department, over seventy other regional law-enforcement and fire agencies, honor guard members from as far as British Columbia and California, and community members surrounded the officer's family in a show of solidarity. On this occasion, the sense of shared grief was especially heightened by Officer Barber's young age and the short time he had been able to serve.

As one of a number of new methods to combat auto theft, License Plate Reader Technology automatically takes digital pictures of the license plates of the vehicles that the specially equipped patrol car passes. If the license plate is listed as a stolen vehicle or is flagged for any other reason, the officer is notified by the system that they have just passed a vehicle of interest. The cameras located on the top of the patrol car scan the images to a computer that has the ability to read up to 1,000 plates per hour and can cover both sides of a street at once.

Two workers unveil one of two billboards donated to the Seattle Police Department by Clear Channel to support the Department's recruiting efforts. The Seattle Police Department is an equal opportunity employer and is actively hiring both entry level and lateral entry police officers. The billboard directs interested candidates to the recruiting website www.seattlepolicejobs.com.

In 2006 the Department hired 45 new officers. Recruiting will continue to go to great heights in that there will be an ever-increasing need for officers in the future. The City Council approved 49 new sworn officer positions from 2005-2007 and a recent neighborhood policing staffing plan calls for 105 new officers to be added between 2008 and 2012.

After a two-and-a-half-year investigation, Chief Kerlikowski and Washington State Attorney General Rob McKenna announced the conclusion of a vast organized crime investigation that recovered over $500,000 in stolen property. Liberty Loan Pawn Shop was found to be trafficking in stolen property from numerous thefts. Two suspects were charged with a total of 31 criminal acts stemming from an elaborate scheme in which 'hired' thieves stole predetermined items from targeted merchants. The victims of the orchestrated thefts ranged from high-end art glass galleries to retailers specializing in couture clothing. The stolen items were kept for personal use, or were sold at the pawn shop. This case originally came to the attention of Detective Dan Stokke and the subsequent investigation required thousands of hours of undercover work. Search warrants served in July 2005 yielded so much recovered stolen property that a special room in the Evidence Section had to be created to store everything.

Officer P.B. Nicholls shows off the Automated External Defibrillators (AEDs) that will soon be standard equipment in all Seattle Police patrol cars. Seattle will be one of the first major city police departments to make this lifesaving equipment available to all patrol officers. The project initially started when Ofc. Nicholls requested a Seattle Police Foundation grant for a pilot program for a small number of the devices. But in October 2006, the Seattle Police Department and the Seattle Police Foundation announced a collaboration that will result in full deployment of AEDs to all patrol cars. The AED project is possible due to the generosity of Craig and Julie Tall, who are personally donating $100,000, and Philips Medical Systems, which is donating over half of the needed devices. The Foundation will fund the remainder of the project.

11.13.2006

Officers respond to the scene of a traffic fatality involving another Seattle police officer. The circumstances were eerie in their similarities. Exactly three months to the day of Officer Barber's death, a new officer named Beth Nowak—just five days out of field training—was on her way to work when a driver in a stolen vehicle crashed into her personal car, killing both of them. Officer Nowak had been heading to the same precinct to work the same watch as Officer Barber. The suspect was a repeat car thief who had a warrant out for his arrest, and a long record of police encounters. The news stunned the Department and hit the East Precinct especially hard. The accident prompted an outcry to look into how criminals are released and supervised by corrections officials.

11.15.2006

A community member reminds drivers to be aware of the crosswalk at busy Admiral Way in West Seattle. Just the day before, Tatsuo Nakata, who served as the Chief of Staff to City Councilmember David Della, was struck and killed here on his way to work. The sadness at the passing of a highly talented and well-liked staffer who was just beginning his political career only heightened the frustration of many concerned about pedestrian accidents. Already recognized as a growing problem, Mayor Greg Nickels had made pedestrian safety one of his biggest priorities in 2005, and the Seattle Police Department and Seattle Department of Transportation had made numerous efforts in this area. In 2006, in addition to installing four red-light cameras, SPD increased emphasis patrols at busy intersections, taught safety tips through educational outreach to the general public and heightened police presence in school zones. The Department also partnered with the Washington State Traffic Commission, selecting Rainier Avenue corridor to conduct a four-month emphasis. The crosswalk at Admiral Way has been recently updated with flashing lights and new signage.

12.2.2006

After losing an SPD officer less than a month before, the Department reeled from the news that King County Sheriff's Deputy Steve Cox had been shot and killed by a suspect during a seemingly routine response to a house party complaint. Deputy Cox worked in the White Center area. Because the area straddles county and city borders, Deputy Cox partnered often with Seattle Police on crime issues and problem solving. He had served the area for the last three years, becoming extremely involved in the community, even becoming president of the North Highline Unincorporated Area Council. After his death, it was fully apparent what he meant to the community. They called him their "Superman" and a huge memorial was created by community members in his honor in downtown White Center.

12.8.2006-1.1.2007

As 2006 neared its close, an emphasis team participated in Drunk Net 2006 to safeguard motorists and pedestrians from drunk drivers during the holidays. Partnering patrol officers, drug recognition officers and the DUI squad, Drunk Net contacted over 1,700 motorists over a one-month period, made a total of 202 impaired-driver arrests, and issued almost 1,400 traffic citations.

STATISTICS

The year 2006 will always have the Capitol Hill murders and the attack at the Jewish Federation firmly imprinted upon Seattle's collective memory. Thankfully these types of events are recognized as being almost unprecedented in Seattle, and the city continues to be one of the safest big cities in the United States. In fact, a 2006 Gallup Poll rated Seattle as the safest major city in the nation.

The crime statistics in 2006 support this. An 8.2 percent increase in violent crimes in 2005 had leveled off by 2006, showing only a slight 0.8 percent increase. While homicides did increase in 2006 by five to a total of 30, this crime continues to be at some of the lowest rates seen since the 1960's. One main area of concern is aggravated assaults with firearms, increasing 18 percent since 2005 and 46 percent since 2004.

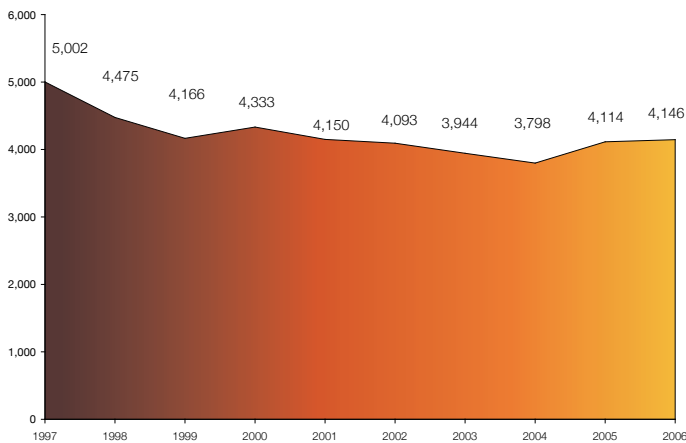

Total crime for 2006 decreased 8.2 percent, largely due to a solid reduction in property crimes which dropped sharply by 9 percent from the previous year. Most notable was auto theft which decreased by 15 percent.

A Note on Arrests:

Historically, investigative bookings have been counted as part of the "Investigative Holds" classification. Beginning in 2006, investigative holds will be counted in the crime classification for which the subject was booked, to more accurately reflect Uniform Crime Reporting guidelines as well as the nature of the offense that occasioned the booking. For this reason, these data cannot be compared to previous years.

AWARDS

Every year, the Seattle Police Department honors the great work of employees during the Seattle Police Awards Banquet. On October 20, 2006 over 1,000 members of the Department and community gathered at the Sheraton Hotel in downtown Seattle. Local comedian Pat Cashman was the emcee and the keynote was by Seahawks Head Coach Mike Holmgren.

The Banquet is always a chance to hear about some of the amazing efforts and good work of the men and women of the Seattle Police Department. 2006 was especially moving, with many stories of heroism, and videos showing interviews with citizens whose lives were saved during incidents throughout the year.

The Seattle Police Foundation presents the banquet, which also serves as a fundraiser for grant programs. This was the fifth anniversary of the Awards Banquet, and it broke many previous records of the year before. More people than ever attended, and the high fundraising goals of the Foundation for the event were exceeded.
